Wetland Classroom at Dr. Sally K. Ride Elementary School

by Terry Clark (adapted from text provided by Environmental Systems Analysis, Inc.)

The Maryland Department of the Environment, Winchester Homes Inc., and Dr. Sally K. Ride Elementary School entered a cooperative educational effort to educate students about the importance and development of wetlands. Governor Parris N. Glendening has challenged the citizens of Maryland to form partnerships to replace 60,000 acres of wetlands that were lost since the 1940s.

When the Dr. Sally K. Ride Elementary School was developed, wetlands that would have been covered over with concrete were saved. Winchester Homes undertook the wetland creation project at the school to replace wetlands affected by nearby housing development. When the educational project was suggested, plans were changed to increase learning opportunities. First, the wetland grading and planting design was adjusted to include a greater variety of emergent, scrub-shrub, and forested wetland areas.

Then, Winchester Homes agreed to participate in the inclusion of the Dr. Sally K. Ride Interpretive Trail, complete with handicapped access, interpretive signs, species tags, an interpretive guide and in a special water and wetlands educational package.

A committee of school members, Winchester Homes, the environmental consultant, and state and local government agency personnel provided advice on the trail alignment, construction materials, signs and educational materials. Environmental Systems Analysis Inc. researched, designed and constructed the wetland and trail. The company also researched, developed and compiled the interpretive guide and educational package. The recently completed wetland ecosystem and interpretive trail gives students the chance to learn first-hand how wetlands make our lives better.
